VALEDICTORY. With this issue my connection with the Colonist ceases, and it is due alike to the public, the many friends of the paper, to my self and successors, that I should briefly notice the fact. The Colonist was estab lished by myself in 1858, and since then it has constantly been under my personal super vision and control. During that long period I have enjoyed in connection with the paper many favors and a substantial support. So marked on some occasions has the support of the friends and patrons of the paper been, that it is with a pang of regret I now dissolve the connection and bid them farewell, in all probability never again to renew my connecion with the public as editor and proprieto THE TWO-STORY BRICK

In assuming the proprietorship and publi cation of this journal, the BRITISH COLONIST PUBLISHING COMPANY deem it due to the public to make a brief statement of the views and principles by which they are actuated in the undertaking. The BRITISH COLONIST will advocate those liberal and progressive principles so vital to the growth and stability of every new colony. Acknowledging the necessity of a firm and energetic rule in founding and building up a country, the Colonist will endeavor to strengthen the hands of the Government in all just, enlightened and patriotic measures while on the other hand it will faithfully guard the rights and liberties of the people and will promote to the utmost of its power, the introduction and development of every scheme calculated to advance their prosperity and happiness, both collectively and individually.

The rebels made a heavy attack on the corps of General Thomas, forming the left wing of our General Thomas, forming the left wing of our army. At the same time, they attacked the right wing which was thought to be a leint. Gen. McCook's and Crittenden's troops were thrown into the engagement as soon as convenience afforded, the main portion of their forces being on the march at the time. The fight on the left wing was of a very desperate character. The enemy was reculsed, but on being reinforced, regained their former position, from which they were subsequently driven after a severe engagement of over an hour. Gen. The election of Chief and Assistant En gineers of the Victoria, V. I. Fire Department, took place yesterday in the Truck House of the Union Hook and Ladder Company, and resulted in the return of Messis. J. C. Keenan and J. S. Abbot.

The utmost good feeling, however, pre vailed throughout the entire proceedings, and although a difference of opinion existed, and was sometimes unhesitatingly expressed re-garding the qualifications of the candidates, we did not hear a single word uttered in wrath or undue excitement.

The adjourned sitting of this court was held yesterday at noon.

The first application called was that of Leon De Louey, for licensing the Royal Lyceum.

Mr. Wight appeared in behalf of the application.

The Bench inquired if it was admitted that a certain hand-bill emanated from the applicant.

Mr. Wight replied that Mr. Harry Courtaine, manager of the Theatre, attached to the Hall, was the Author of the bill,
Mr. Pemberton then said that the admission at once justified the refusal of the license.

Mr. Wight contended that the bill in question should not be taken in connection with this application. The Bench had before intimated that a license could not be granted for the sale of liquors in the body of the Hall, but the there must be a separate bar for refreshment. In such case the retailer of liquors could no possibly be held responsible for any violat of public morality or deceney on the part of the Theatrical management. As well migh it be held that the proprietors of the Solon attached to the Victoria Theatric could be made accountable for any representation up on that stage having an immoral or impropersended to the Victoria Theatric could be made accountable for any representation up on that stage having an immoral or impropersended. The managers alone were liable to indictenent. He did not appear in support of an application from the manager of the Lyceum, but for the proprietor of the refreshment bar adjoining.

The Court would not entertain Mr. Wight's argument, and rejected the application.

The application of Mr. Earles for a newly constructed house on Government street was opposed by Mr. Bishop on the grounds that the premises in question could not be called a house but merely a skeleton.

The Bench ordered an inspection of the premises.

M. Dennes appeared to support the application. Mr. Wight contended that the bill in ques

The application for a fresh license for the Pony Saloon upon the occasion of a change of managership, was also refused on the ground that the Court could not grant two licences for the same house.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

MONDAY, Oct. 5, 1863. The Speaker took his seat at 3:25, p. in. Members present Messrs. Young, De Cosmos, Powell, Tolmie, Jackson, Trimble, Burnaby, Duncan, Carswell, Street, Pidwell and

Bayley:
After the transaction of the ordinary business, the House resumed its sittings in Committee of the Whole on the Union question. Mr. Jackson in the chair.

DEBATE ON THE UNION-Continued. DEBATE ON THE UNION—Continued.

Dr. Helmoken stated that before giving the floor to other hon, members who had not yet spoken, he would simply wish to reiterate his former arguments; he laid down this position, that free trade is absolutely necessary to the prospecity of Victoria, and that with free trade union with British Columbia is impossible; the only way is either a federal union or to remain as we are.

He urged the necessity of cultivating friendly relations with British Columbia with a view to arrange terms of union. Supposing that there were an increase in the population and consequently in the representation of British Columbia, with the above proviso in the organic act we would be as secure as we are now. He advocated the broad British principle advanced by the member for Esqui union and leave the conditions and stipulations to ourselves. Suppose that British Columbia should agree to a union and our free port and that they attempt to raise our taxes and thus cause us to give up our free port. With fifteen members from Vancouver Island this would be impossible, at least for so long a time that the free port would cease to be an object. The next point is the system of revenue; in this colony the revenue is raised by direct taxes—in British Columbia by a tariff; but the example of Great Britain, France, the United States, and other countries showed that the two systems may be readily combined. A united legislature may impose a tariff and also sustain direct taxation—for instance, as in Canada. The only difference here would be that the taxes would be levied outside of the tariff limits, which could not constitute a great difficulty. A further point would be what proportion Vancouver Island would pay of the common expenditure, and what proportion we should have expended here. Were we to unite there would of course be only one revenue, which would bear the common expense, and be pledged for the consolidated debt; by this we could easily find what balance would be the two debts would be £8000, chargeable on is impossible; the only way is citter a rederatunion or to remain as we are.

Mr. De Cosmos said that he looked upon this debate as the most important one that could be raised in this colony; it was a question whether the small colony of Vancouver Island would consent to unite with the colony of British Columbia. At present, from the views generally expressed in this from the views generally expressed in this House and in the colony, he concluded that the general desire was for union; at the same there seemed to be a general fear of. This fear seemed to be confined expressly to the free port question. In order to deal with the question properly it was necessary to take a broad survey of the position of both colonies. In taking sary to take a broad survey of the position of both colonies. In taking a geographical survey of the colony of British Columbia one was struck with the vast extent of territory compassed within its boundaries; stretching from the shores of the Pacific to the summit of the Rocky mountains, and from the parallel of 49° to the borders of Russian America it contained an area of 400,000 square miles, over five times the size of Great Britain. In the colony of Vancouver Island we have an area of 12,000 square miles. With this vast extent of territory, we must ask if it is adapted to a high state of civilization. We find in British Columbia a large proportion, probably one-third of the whole extent, suitable for agricultural pursuits, the same as those British Columbia & large proportion, no bably one-third of the whole extent, suitable for agricultural pursuits, the same as those carried on in similar latitude, or under the same isotherm. In Vancouver Island there is but a small amount of agricultural land, but our mineral productions are invaluable and our manufacturing resources—climate, water-power, harbors, iron, coal, everything necessary to carry on extensive operations—are unbounded. We have fisheries us prolific as any in the known world, which may and he believed would prove a greater source of wealth than all the gold of Cariboo; in the two colonies combined we have overything necessary to build up a great agricultural and manufacturing interest. We have more than 100,000 square miles of land adapted to the highest state of cultivaleft for other purposes. The joint interest of the two debts would be £8000, chargeable on the consolidated revenue. In alluding to the civil list in the Duke of Newcastle's despatch civil list in the Duke of Newcastle's despatch he compared the list of Vancouver Island, which was £6,200, with that of British Columbia, which was £7,700, and showed that by union the colonies would save £6,200 on the civil list alone—a large fund for each colony, and a very desirable saving, particularly when the expenditure of British Columbia for the present year is likely to be in excess of the revenue. He argued that the same staff could do the work of both governments at the same expense; by adopting a form of county government, the the same state could use he work of congovernments at the same expense; by adopting a form of county government, the revenues of both county and government might be collected by the same officers at much less exponse. This course was adopted everywhere; in the United States the same officer collected two or three different taxes at the same time. When we see that the expenses of Victoria are $8000, while the revenue is only say $25,000, we must feel the necessity of economy. The total charge
on the consolidated revenue would be £15,600,
of this Vancouver Island would pay £1,488,
while she now pays including interest, £8,500.
In British Columbia the present expenditue
is £13,200, while united she would save £2,058. The hon, member said he was in favor of appropriating the surplus revenue of the colony to the wants of that colony in which it was raised. He also urged the territorial advantages of a union as a means of Isad adapted to the highest state of cultivation, and we have now to inquire what, with all these great natural advantages, is to be our future? He would quote some statistics relative to other countries to show that these colonies possessed all the natural facilities for a great country. He quoted the areas and population of Great Britain and Canada, showing that a great part of both countries were as poor and barren as any part of British Columbia. The area of Great Britain was 88,000 square miles, with a population of 20,000.000; of Canada, 350.000 square miles with a population of 20,000.000; of Canada, 350.000 square miles with a population of upwards of 2,000,000; France. 203,736 square miles, population 36,000,000; Germany, which was perhaps the best comparison, with an area of 244,360 square miles, had o population of 42,000,000. Such as all these British Columbia and Vancouver Island might become if united. Compare the area of British Columbia with other countries under the same isotherm and it has all the natural advantages to become a great nation. We have now a country before us in a state of nature, such as all these European countries were a thousand years ago, or as Canada and the Eastern States were two centuries ago. With such a country, possessing such industrial resources, the question now is and adapted to the highest state of cultivawhich it was raised. He also urged the terdiricial advantages of a union as a means of a revenue; the proceeds of land sales were the natural source of the civil list. The next point was the courts; everyone felt the necessity of more than one judge in this colony,
there being no appeal but to the Privy Council of England. By a union, we would have two or three judges, who might form a Court of Appeal for the united colonies, and would be of great benefit. Another point was the shipping; by a union we would be enabled to prevent foreign vessels from taking cargoes from a port in this colony to a directly of the colony of the colonies of the colonies.
The hon. member here said that he had not concluded his argument, but as the hour was late he would be willing to defer the remainder of his speech. The House accord ingly rose and reported progress, the next stiting being fixed for to-morrow, unless the arrival of the mail steamer should intervene.

En Route from the Mines to Victoria:—

For his part he had chosen to follow the great and the Eastern States were two centuries ago. With such a country, possessing such industrial resources, the question now is shall we establish such a policy as will raise our country to the high standard of England's civilization? such a policy as will raise our bearing to the Pacific a people who will vie with the mother country in progress, in enlightenment, and in happiness? or shall we adopt the shortsighted policy of Venice or the Hanscatic towns, or follow the example of those weak disjointed British colonies founded when it was the policy of England to discourage any attempt at manufactures, when there were no steamboats, no railroads, no free press, no foreign trade or anaufactures? those colonies of which an American writer has said that they were "small communities of subordinate Englishmen cordially working against each other." we expected something) they did not seem to oare how we fared. At the 100 mile post however we had a hearty meal, and at Loch Lomond House a very nice dinner.

After leaving the latter place we journeyed on purposing to pass the night at the 70 mile house. It was a very fine house with window blinds, and everything to ensure neatness.

window binds, and everything to easiste meatices.

"Its tempting aspect drew me from my way." No doubt the proprietor of this establishment intended the house for the traveling public, but we had hardly time to sattle down comfortably before his representative told us he could not possibly allow us to remain beneath the roof. I for my own part had not the least idea of going any farther that night, nor would I think of suffering this pampered menial to eject me before morning. Where a bar room is kept for the public it would be right that the traveling public should keep the bar room, and as a matter of course it was done. As nothing could be contributed to our comfort at a house where persons are kept who do not know what comfort means was done. As nothing control to our comfort at a house where persons are kept who do not know what comfort means (except by the almighty dollar). After a miserable breakfast we turned our backs upon this miserably conducted house and wished God speed our journey.

In the evening we came to the 59 mile post, and, knowing we could get a good meal, we did it ample justice, after the poor morning's meal; and I can assure you it was far more beneficial to us than turtle soup, or a bottle of champagne to a broken winded alderman. From the last place to Lillocet we fared well, and the bitterness of a long dreary pilgrimage in the wilds of Cariboo and back were in a great measure at an end I came by way Douglas.

I do not write this so much for my own gratification, but as a guide for those who have still to go through the ordeal when coming from the mines; and if they mind they will know where a good meal can be obtained, while they avoid those who would make a fat pocket by keeping a lean kitchen for the traveling public.
